

12 Jewelry Trends for 2015: 5 New Layering Necklaces

January 23, 2015
Source: JCK Online.com

The annual list of 12 Jewelry Trends for 2015 aims to serve as a guideline for store purchases in the new year, highlighting pieces and materials trending now, based on the clothing, color, red carpet, and real-life influences at work in the market. Layering necklaces are the second trend on the list. Here are five new pieces for retailers to consider stocking.

Layering necklaces. The relaxed silhouettes of spring coupled with a bonanza of different necklines means that layering styles will be worthwhile additions to jewelry boxes. Many in industry are already prepared, having debuted new SKUs in Las Vegas last year, so jewelers just need to check stock to be sure they have a healthy selection on hand. These pieces can be multi-strands or singles layered with others—including future gifts.

Boheme Beaded Extra Long necklace with freshwater pearls and a double-sided silver clasp with 1.09 cts. t.w. clear topaz, $850; Anzie

Necklace in 18k rose gold with 1.12 cts. t.w. rose-cut diamonds, $2,500; Vivaan

Necklace in 18k gold with 0.18 ct. t.w. diamonds, $2,490; Jude Frances

Long necklace in 18k gold with blackened silver drop pendant with 0.65 ct. t.w. champagne diamonds, $2,420; Syna

Ombre Scorpio Bib necklace in 18k gold with 4.9 cts. t.w. color-enhanced diamonds set in a light-cured ceramic, Plevé; $14,960